Put Tags Upon Them-Hrs. Warren, Wife of the Wyoming Senator, is Becoming a Favorite in Washington.

Washington, March 4.—[Special tele-gram to The Herald.]—The New York Times in its Washington correspondence this morning prints the following: "Mr. Edmunds does not spend much of his time in the Senate chamber, but when he is there he never occupies any of the easy chairs and lounges placed in the rear of the last row of deaks. A good many persons were therefore astonished to-day to see the shining pate and St. Jerome countenance of the Vermont Senator hovering about that corner of the chamber, and many conjectures were ventured as to the reason for his sudden change of habit. But these conjectures went to the winds when, during the afternoon, a duplicate bald pate and St. Jerome countenance came walking into the chamber and sat down at Mr. Edmunds' desk. Then it was dis-covered that the Vermont Senator had a double in the person of Mr. Claggett, of Idaho, who has come on to dispute the title of Mr. Dubois to succeed Mr. McConnell as a United States Senator after to morrow noon. If the title is settled in Mr. Claggett's favor, the presiding officer of the Senate will need to attach tags to the two Senators to know how to respond to either of them when he addresses the hair.
